- 1 Bring a large pot of salted water — salty like the sea — to a boil over high heat; drop in pasta and cook until tender with a bite, about 3 minutes. You want them slightly under al dente. Drain pasta, reserving 2 cups or so of pasta cooking water; set aside.
- 2 Heat the creamy chickpea sauce in a large sauté pan over medium heat until just beginning to steam in the pan. Add the spinach and stir; cook for a minute or two to wilt. Add cooked pasta to the sauté pan with the creamy sauce and spinach. Add some of the cooking water (1/4 to 1/2 cup per serving) to loosen the thick cream sauce. Stir to combine and cook until the sauce coats the noodles and the noodles are now clearly al dente, about 2 minutes. Check seasoning and adjust with more salt and pepper, as desired. Mixture should look creamy. If it's too thick, add a splash more pasta water to loosen sauce.
- 3 Transfer creamy chickpea pasta to bowls, and top with reserved chickpeas and sarvecchio cheese. Serve immediately, with a grind or two of black pepper or some lemon wedges for squeezing on top. Enjoy!
